

WATER WORKS V

A darkened room is occupied by a minimalist grotto, creating an almost silent, not quite motionless space for reflection. Like a giant jewel, the room is veiled with a series of diaphanous liquid panels that capture light to reveal space in unexpected ways.

A sense of cool humidity pervades. An ethereal, contemplative atmosphere combines with strange vertiginous bending of the elements at play.

Artists
Jennifer Turpin

Date
1993

Description
Kinetic water sculpture, 6 units each 4.5m x 3m x 200mm

Materials
Water, nylon lines, copper pipes and tanks

Location
The National Gallery of Victoria 1993

Exhibition
Fifth Australian Sculpture Triennial